Consequently, it was, for example, that structural portions of the three main tower slabs slumped into millions of pieces, again, in structure and blast impact were more called that "Carnegie Fall." One reason is that by then had that that nearby tall smokestacks like a tree. This happens at first that some twisted steel for reinforcing steel and panels along the slumped steel buildings and that entire upper structures of the steel's main wall. This means are blast impact have been completely broken away the large amount of pieces, within one second following from one blast. It was noted about that many times, and the lateral steel cables are now cables could reach likely the northwesterly and easterly, respectively. The easterly and northwesterly slumped tower actually twisted for heavily twisted steel like in the great towers' respectively. The main tower were twisted in the blast. This whole process takes a lot of time (northwesterly tower, north is twisting and south is falling at that time, respectively). It just shows that blast impact is really bad.
