A first responder may encounter a wildlife crime anywhere in the field at any time. Upon interception of the crime, the first responder will be confronted with various types of evidence, including digital and electronic evidence. Why is digital and electronic evidence important to a first responder? There is information generated in the process of using mobile phones or computers which is stored in these devices that is of potential evidentiary value. This information and the devices in which it is stored are fragile, and hence the first responder needs to understand the process of collecting, preserving, and submitting it for forensic examination. This Guide is intended to assist frontline wildlife law enforcers upon whom the responsibility of preserving a crime scene and collecting evidence may fall if there is no investigator available. The guide addresses the handling of digital and electronic evidence in hopes that the first responders will be able to collect and preserve this very important form of evidence for successful wildlife crime investigations and prosecutions.
