

World War 1 Timeline

As 100 years passes since the start of Britain's involvement in the First World War let's take a look at the key dates of this Great War

June 28, 1914
Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his wife Sophie, the night before their 14th wedding anniversary, are shot in Sarajevo and as a result Austria-Hungary declares war on Serbia

August 3, 1914

Germany declares war on France, and France declares war on Germany. Britain then sends an ultimatum to withdraw from Belgium but this is rejected by the Germans

November 1914

Many months were spent in trench warfare. Gasping armies conducted battles of attrition close ranges, from areas of ditches dug into the ground to prevent the opposition from gaining any more territory

July 1, 1916 The battle of the Somme began fought at the Somme in France over four and half months where over 1 million men were wounded or killed, making it one of the bloodiest battles in human history

April 4, 1918 The US joined the allied forces along with Britain and declared war on Germany

July 30, 1914
France and Germany who are already fighting over land ownership begin to take their troops along with Russia in defence, fearing the fighting may spread further

August 4, 1914
Great Britain declares war on Germany following the many of the allies that it would join by Christmas 1914, King George V of Britain declared and introduced the need for a volunteer army. A new way to encourage with a poster of King George was created to encourage the men in Britain to join in the later army which prepared to go to war saying 'Your King and Country need you' is called come

May 2, 1915
The Lusitania, a British ocean liner full of civilians was sunk by the German navy on its journey from New York, US to Liverpool, UK and over 1000 people died. The incident played significant role in turning people opinion against Germany both in the United States and Britain

June 1916
Russia had begun but were refused and millions of people in Germany. Shortage of supplies, were slowing to death

November 11, 1918 Four and half years later and the end of the war is finally announced also referred to as Armistice Day. 18 million people had been dead and over 40 million injured, perhaps less would have been the same again
