

The background of the slide is a photograph showing a man and three children in a slum. The man, in the center, has a somber expression and is wearing a brown shawl. He is surrounded by three children: two boys in the foreground looking directly at the camera, and a girl behind them. They are in a shanty town with makeshift tents made of white plastic sheeting in the background.

The World Health Organization between North and South Nitsan Chorev, 2012-05-01 Since 1948 the World Health Organization WHO has launched numerous programs aimed at improving health conditions around the globe ranging from efforts to eradicate smallpox to education programs about the health risks of smoking In setting global health priorities and carrying out initiatives the WHO bureaucracy has faced the challenge of reconciling the preferences of a small minority of wealthy nations who fund the organization with the demands of poorer member countries who hold the majority of votes In The World Health Organization between North and South Nitsan Chorev shows how the WHO bureaucracy has succeeded not only in avoiding having its agenda co opted by either coalition of member states but also in reaching a consensus that fit the bureaucracy s own principles and interests Chorev assesses the response of the WHO bureaucracy to member state pressure in two particularly contentious moments when during the 1970s and early 1980s developing countries forcefully called for a more equal international economic order and when in the 1990s the United States and other wealthy countries demanded international organizations adopt neoliberal economic reforms In analyzing these two periods Chorev demonstrates how strategic maneuvering made it possible for a vulnerable bureaucracy to preserve a relatively autonomous agenda promote a consistent set of values and protect its interests in the face of challenges from developing and developed countries alike

It explores the historical institutional and theoretical foundations of the UN as well as major global trends and challenges facing the organization today including changing major power dynamics, new threats to peace and security, the migration and refugee crises, the COVID 19 pandemic, and the existential challenges of climate change and sustainability. Thoroughly revised and expanded, it contains two new chapters on the UN and the environment and on human security including issues of health, food security, global migration, and human trafficking. There is enhanced analysis of theoretical perspectives on post colonialism, feminist theory, constructivism, and non Western views. New content has also been added on the UN's budget crisis, public private partnerships, and the role of women in the organization. By examining the UN as an intergovernmental organization facing the broader need for global cooperation to address economic, social, and environmental interdependencies alongside the threats posed by rising nationalism and populism, this popular text is the perfect reference for all students and practitioners of international organizations, global governance, and international relations.
