18. The company's 2010 financial statements (in $ millions):

1. Identify the main idea of the passage. The author discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records in a laboratory setting. This is crucial for ensuring the reliability of experimental results and for facilitating the replication of studies by other researchers.
2. Explain the significance of the data presented in the table. The table shows the results of three experiments conducted under different conditions. The data indicates that the reaction rate increases significantly as the temperature rises from 20°C to 40°C, while the effect of concentration is less pronounced. This suggests that temperature is a more critical factor in influencing the reaction rate in this specific system.
