history professors may sharply disagree on even basic narratives and how historical interpretations can be influenced by contemporary concerns By illuminating these historiographical debates and linking them to key skills required by historians World History through Case Studies shows how the study of history is relevant to a new generation of students and teachers going and a complex tradition of enquiry has developed across national borders in the last 30 years focusing in particular on developing students understanding of historical meta concepts such as evidence and causation There has been comparatively little focus however on the historical content that students study on how they study it and on how mastery of historical content contributes to students overall picture of a historical past This volume gathers together recent research and theorising from around the world on key issues central to historical learning and instruction What sense do students make of the history that they are taught Are students able to organise historical knowledge in order to form large scale representations of the past and what difficulties can children face in doing so What are the relationships that obtain between history as an academic discipline as practised in universities and history as a subject taught in schools What can research tell us about the effects of instructional strategies that aim to help students join up what they learn in class into meaningful historical knowledge and understanding
