Beyond Greenwash Hamish van der Ven, 2019-03-21 From green frogs and blue angels to white bunnies modern consumers are confronted by a growing array of colorful eco labels on everything from coffee to computers When eco labels are credible they can lead to dramatic change in environmental practices broadly and quickly by leveraging the purchasing power of corporate clients e g Walmart and McDonalds to influence global supply chains But the credibility of such labels is highly variable and despite the existence of established practices for eco labeling many labels remain little more than superficial exercises in greenwash How can consumers separate greenwash from genuine attempts to address environmental challenges Beyond Greenwash addresses this question by systematically investigating the credibility of transnational eco labeling organizations across countries and commercial sectors Using an innovative proxy measure for credibility that examines adherence to established best practices Hamish van der Ven proposes a novel theory of rigor and credibility in transnational eco labeling that upends conventional wisdom He argues that the credibility of an eco label does not depend on who creates or manages it whether a government industry association professional standard setter or environmental NGO Rather it depends on which types of businesses use the label More specifically eco labeling organizations that target bigger consumer facing retailers tend to create credible eco labels out of a desire to insulate their clients from critical scrutiny and gain acceptance in new markets This theory challenges the conventional wisdom that only governments or environmental NGOs can create meaningful environmental governance and suggests that who is being governed matters as much if not more than who is doing the governing

Citizens of the World Megan Threlkeld, 2022-05-10 Between 1900 and 1950 many internationalist U S women referred to themselves as citizens of the world This book argues that the phrase was not simply a rhetorical flourish it represented a demand to participate in shaping the global polity and an expression of women's obligation to work for peace and equality The nine women profiled here invoked world citizenship as they promoted world government a permanent machinery to end war whether in the form of the League of Nations the United Nations or a full fledged world federation These women agreed neither on the best form for such a government nor on the best means to achieve it and they had different definitions of peace and different levels of commitment to genuine equality But they all saw themselves as part of a global effort to end war that required their participation in the international body politic Excluded from full national citizenship they saw in the world polity opportunities for engagement and equality as well as for peace Claiming world citizenship empowered them on the world stage It gave them a language with which to advocate for international cooperation Citizens of the World not only provides a more complete understanding of the kind of world these women envisioned and the ways in which they claimed membership in the global community It also draws attention to the ways in which they were excluded from international institution building and to the critiques many of them leveled at those institutions Women s arguments for world government and their practices of world citizenship represented an alternative reaction to the crises of the first half of the twentieth century one predicated on cooperation and equality rather than competition and force
