Initial chapters discuss how to recognise and build on existing artistic abilities and pedagogical skills; how to encourage children's creativity; how to lead arts appreciation experiences; and the general principles of planning and assessment. Part 2 specifically examines the five arts areas: dance, drama, media arts, music, and visual arts. Young Children and Families in the Information Age Kelly L. Heider, Mary Renck Jalongo, 2014-12-05 This edited book presents the most recent theory research and practice on information and technology literacy as it relates to the education of young children Because computers have made it so easy to disseminate information the amount of available information has grown at an exponential rate making it impossible for educators to prepare students for the future without teaching them how to be effective information managers and technology users Although much has been written about information literacy and technology literacy in secondary education there is very little published research about these literacies in early childhood education Recently the National Association for the Education of Young Children and the Fred Rogers Center for Early Learning and Children's Media at Saint Vincent College published a position statement on using technology and interactive media as tools in early childhood programs This statement recommends more research to better understand how young children use and learn with technology and interactive media and also to better understand any short and long term effects Many assume that today's young children are digital natives with a great understanding of technology However children may know how to operate digital technology but be unaware of its dangers or its value to extend their abilities This book argues that information and technology literacy include more than just familiarity with the digital environment They include using technology safely and ethically to demonstrate creativity and innovation to communicate and collaborate to conduct research and use information and to think critically solve problems and make decisions

English as a Lingua Franca in Latin American Education Sonia Morán Panero,Maritza M. Martínez-Sánchez,Gloria J. Ronzón-Montiel,2024-10-21

ELF researchers have been describing the dynamic and fluid ways in which multilingual speakers shape English in transcultural communication for more than two decades now While this work seriously challenges traditional static and prejudiced views of English the diverse and variable nature of its uses and users continues to be undermined in many EFL programs around the world This is also the case in many Latin American contexts which have been described as fertile ground for native speaker ideology but where the body of ELF literature is still scarce when compared to Asian and European settings This book is the first to bring together a series of empirical studies on the implications of ELF perspectives for communicative educational and policy making practices across different Latin American countries It not only explores how ELF perspectives can inform students and educators in these settings but also how locally emerging voices experiences and research traditions can help expand ELF theorising as well The volume generates new opportunities for dialogue and global collaboration between researchers and practitioners interested in ELF studies as a critical approach to English language use and education
