Worshipping Evolution S God:

Worshipping Evolution's God Jason John, 2015-05-25 What does it mean for humans to accept that we are not the centre of life but continue to worship God in a tradition which has assumed that we are How do we worship the God of this evolving life A God who is ancient Personal but not human As much female as male The God who is beyond us became one with us and many Christians claim one of us and who remains within and amongst us This is the kind of understanding of God which comes to us through a serious engagement with the new stories about the origins and nature of creation These new stories are based on the observations of cosmologists evolutionists and ecologists for example What do these new creation stories mean for our understanding of God ourselves and our place in the world How do they nurture and shape us through worship These questions confront people of all religious traditions This book might be of some use to you whatever your tradition especially if you are a Jew or Muslim It is however written within the Christian tradition by me a minister in the Uniting Church in Australia with an honours degree in zoology a postgraduate degree in environmental studies and a PhD on the implications of the science stories about creation for the Christian story After finishing the PhD I was privileged to become the ecominister at Scots Church in Adelaide which created a range of opportunities to explore how a rather esoteric PhD could be of use and even exciting for a general audience Probably the longest lasting legacy of that ministry will be the ecofaith worshipping community which meets in Botanic Park and much of this book was originally worked through with that wonderful bunch of people over two years You can find out more about them at <http://ecofaith.org> This book starts with the ritual which I created for the first six weeks of the community s life with a brief commentary on the reasons for each element Then follows the first five weeks of reflections written for that group plus some of the themes we explored later which seem to be somewhat unique and therefore worth turning more trees into paper to record of religion and believe that the present intellectual moment offers enormous in some ways unprecedented opportunities both in the study of religion and historiography But at the same time difficulties and dangers loom together with the opportunities My specialty and prime set of examples lie in the study of ancient Mediterranean religion if indeed there is something that can rightly be called Mediterranean religion or even called religion Many specialists in the study of religion and also many of those who study ancient cultures doubt or even reject outright religion as a cross historical category on the one hand and on the other anything common about religion across the ancient Mediterranean And some cognitive scientists who against religion specialists have argued for the centrality of gods to religion then agree with the skeptics that religion is not a coherent social object a social kind I will argue that long discredited forms of anti realism and untenable anthropocentrism haunt both groups Among other areas I work in Christianity and Judaism Do they belong to Mediterranean religion One can easily see how coming to an understanding of what religion is and what Mediterranean religion is form key questions I will argue that religion is a robust realistic entity a social kind and that ancient Mediterranean religion even with all of its great diversity operated with some key common principles It is no secret that Christianity and Judaism have presented themselves as unique and essentially untouched by an inferior and degenerate religiosity that characterized everyone else in the Mediterranean History looks different when one dispenses with such normatively heavy freight and situates the two within rather than outside of Mediterranean religion

The Origin of Worship Rafael Karsten,1905 God's House is Our House Richard S. Vosko,2006 The liturgical reforms that have guided congregations over the last few decades have transformed what different denominations know about themselves and their worship Worshipers are no longer spectators but active participants in the ritual acts that once were the possession of the clergy As the liturgy is modified church buildings are altered How does all such change affect the architectural style of church buildings Vosko provides a foundation for building or renovating a place of worship and presents a thorough checklist for spaces art furnishings and appointments He discusses many concerns and offers practical advice He also presents issues that need further consideration in every project
