Falun Gong in the United States Noah Porter, 2003 Falun Gong also known as Falun Dafa has been described in many ways It has been called qigong one of many schools of physical exercises that aim at improving health and developing supernatural abilities Scholars and mainstream media have referred to it as a spiritual movement or religion although practitioners claim it is not a religion It has been called a cult in the pejorative sense rather than in a sociological context by the Chinese government and by some Western critics In the writings of Li Hongzhi the founder of Falun Gong it is referred to in different ways though primarily as a cultivation practice The question of how to define Falun Gong is not just an academic issue the use of the cult label has been used to justify the persecution of practitioners in China To a limited degree the Chinese Government is able to extend the persecution overseas How society defines Falun Gong has implications for action on the level of policy as well as the shaping of social cultural and personal attitudes This research project addresses what Falun Gong is through ethnography Research methods included participant observation semi structured ethnographic interviews both in person and on line and content analysis of text and visual data from Falun Gong books pamphlets and websites Research sites included Tampa Washington D C and cyberspace In order to keep my research relevant to the issues and concerns of the Falun Gong community I was in regular contact with the Tampa practitioners keeping them abreast of my progress and asking for their input My findings are contrary to the allegations made by the Chinese Government and Western anti cultists in many ways Practitioners are not encouraged to rely on Western medicine but are not prohibited from using it Child practitioners are not put at risk Their organizational structure is very loose Finally the Internet has played a vital role in Falun Gong's growth and continuation after the crackdown
