

Example Manual Handling Procedure

Overview

This procedure is applied to all staff who manual handling tasks. It will be responsible for identifying tasks described in this procedure for any manual handling activity or situation.

This procedure complies with the Health and Safety Policy.

Considerations

When carrying out any activity that involves lifting, pushing, pulling, carrying, moving, holding or restraining, it is an indicator of manual work and should be reported to management. Good manual handling practices can help to prevent injury.

However, for most work you do provide to our differing physical abilities.

Managing Manual Handling Risk

[Insert position] identifies tasks activities that involve manual handling and which may pose a risk to employees. Risk is evaluated against the C&C Manager procedure for the following all of manual handling activities and procedures for a regular basis.

Management of Risk

Each manual handling task is broken down into individual tasks for a risk assessment that helps to prevent manual handling injury.

When carrying out tasks are identified through employee observation, self-reporting incident reports, or through management records, and through observation.

[Insert position] and staff identify and record:

- a) workplace and activity changes
- b) time and effort required for task
- c) time taken and related and observed
- d) tasks that require assistance or protection and associated danger that are involved or repetitive
- e) time between consecutive tasks
- f) time between shifts or breaks

When assessing manual handling tasks, consider the following:

- a) workplace and workstation layout
- b) worker's posture and position
- c) objects and frequency of manual handling
- d) instructions and other safety instructions
- e) instructions of the task
