The unexpected explosion of financial services industry and corporations has eventually brought regarding immense opportunities in order to use newer methodologies, principles, practices and tools in the aspect of finance. I believe that it is a very challenging field with which I would further want to gain expertise.

Ever since my school days, I have always been recognized as an individual who is brilliant, after being awarded a scholar badge certificate all throughout my university and school education. I have always been among the top students. It is my passion in the field of computers and mathematics has led me to select computer engineering as my undergraduate program.

As a field, finance had always interested me right from the very start. I have always believed that my interest in this field is a result of my interest and understanding that interest in the field of finance runs in my family. My brother and father both have degrees in the field of finance. I have always loved areas that need problem solving, mathematical and analytical skills. I am quite anxious to combine together the aptitude for and knowledge of, all these skills with the interest in finance.

I have always been planning to have a career in the field finance for many years. However, as an undergraduate of engineering, I concentrated primarily on getting a firm background in computers and mathematics. The years I have spent in the engineering program has equipped me with the skills and knowledge necessary to excel in a quite demanding profession of finance. My skills in Mathematics come from certain courses such as Linear Algebra, Calculus, Probability and Statistics, as well as Differential Equations. Aside from academic interests, I also had some diverse experiences when it comes to extra-curricular activities.
