Dear Customers,

I'm delighted to report that Macronix and Spansion have settled their worldwide patent disputes and legal actions. You can find the press release related to this settlement on our website (<http://www.macronix.com>).

As part of the settlement, both companies agreed to dismiss all patent cases involving them and their downstream customers worldwide. Macronix and Spansion also agreed to grant certain rights to one another under the asserted patents. As a result, you will, as a Macronix customer, continue to enjoy the protection of Macronix's robust patent portfolio, while also being shielded from these Spansion patents. By purchasing our products, you can therefore benefit from the Macronix-developed technological innovations incorporated into our chips without facing further patent infringement threats from Spansion.

We are sorry about the inconvenience that Spansion's patent assertions have caused to you. One of our major goals throughout this dispute with Spansion focused on protecting our customers, and this settlement successfully achieves this goal.

Our relationship and partnership with you is paramount, and we appreciate the trust that you have placed in us and our products over the years. As always, we remain ready to address any question that you may have, and we hope to have the honor and privilege of continuing to serve your needs.

Sincerely,
