Note – this is a generic template and may need to be adjusted for your particular topic

Introduction (usually written last):

 - Indication of how your topic has been focused on something that is manageable within 4000 words.

 - A clear and precise research question (it may change slightly throughout the draft stage):

 - A clear concluding thesis statement and argument (response to the research question. It also may change slightly)

Body:

- It is here where you will craft and support your argument. For the EE, you may decide to divide the paper into multiple parts or sections.
- Each part should have a clear focus; each paragraph within each part should have a purpose, make a point, and be supported by research.
- For your outline you should be able to:
 - Distinguish the order in which you will make your argument:
 - Part One: _____
 - Part Two: _____
