Refining the Concept of Scientific Inference When Working with Big

Data National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, Board on Mathematical Sciences and Their Applications, Committee on Applied and Theoretical Statistics, 2017-03-24 The concept of utilizing big data to enable scientific discovery has generated tremendous excitement and investment from both private and public sectors over the past decade and expectations continue to grow Using big data analytics to identify complex patterns hidden inside volumes of data that have never been combined could accelerate the rate of scientific discovery and lead to the development of beneficial technologies and products However producing actionable scientific knowledge from such large complex data sets requires statistical models that produce reliable inferences NRC 2013 Without careful consideration of the suitability of both available data and the statistical models applied analysis of big data may result in misleading correlations and false discoveries which can potentially undermine confidence in scientific research if the results are not reproducible In June 2016 the National Academies of Sciences Engineering and Medicine convened a workshop to examine critical challenges and opportunities in performing scientific inference reliably when working with big data Participants explored new methodologic developments that hold significant promise and potential research program areas for the future This publication summarizes the presentations and discussions from the workshop
