Structure, conduct and performance of maize markets in Malawi Ochieng, Dennis O., Botha, Rosemary, Baulch, Bob, 2019-08-21 Seasonal analysis of the structure conduct and performance SCP of markets for staple crops has received relatively little attention in food policy analysis yet it has important implications for food and nutrition security This study employs a mixed methods approach to analyze the SCP of maize markets in Malawi in the 2018 19 main harvest and lean seasons We interviewed 749 traders from 74 markets across 8 districts held 28 focus group discussions FGD with a total of 480 farmers and analyzed daily and weekly price data from 13 regional markets The structure of maize markets was explored by examining marketing channels barriers to entry and the competitiveness of different tiers of the marketing chain Inequality in sales revenues switches in trader types between seasons quality and weights standardization and the behavior of traders were used to examine market conduct Performance was assessed by examining traders costs and margins and the spatial and temporal integration of maize markets We find that Malawi s maize market is pyramidal in structure and highly competitive at lower tiers of trade but oligopolistic at higher tiers The market channels vary across seasons with switches between trader types and instances of rural urban trade reversals There is considerable inequality of sales revenues among traders of similar capacities and a widespread lack of structured trading despite existing institutions A high ratio of marketing costs to revenue suggests marketing inefficiencies Malawi maize prices were highly seasonal and more volatile than neighboring countries In contrast to previous studies our findings show weak spatial integration of markets and slow price adjustments to long run equilibrium values even among short distance market pairs The study highlights five pathways to improving Malawi s maize marketing system 1 increased policy predictability to promote private sector investment 2 institutionalization of quality grades and standardization of weights and measures 3 increased commercialization of smallholder maize production 4 investment in enabling infrastructure and 5 the promotion of structured trading

Digital developments and employment Wilma Viviers ,Ali Parry,Emmanuel Orkoh ,Susara J. Jansen van Rensburg,2024-07-31 There is broad consensus in the literature that job creation and productive employment are critical for building a vibrant inclusive economy The digital era has the potential to expand employment by creating new professional pathways and market opportunities particularly in Africa which has high levels of unemployment and considerable room for enhanced economic activity However advancing digital technologies also pose risks and concerns notably that machines will increasingly take over the jobs of humans The effects of digital developments on employment therefore warrant thorough investigation This book delves into the effects of digital developments on employment in Africa using both qualitative and quantitative research methods An important premise in the book is that employment is a leading determinant of inclusive growth which has become a policy imperative across the continent Despite a wide range of views on digital developments and employment there is no well established empirically determined relationship between these two phenomena in Africa which makes policy making difficult The book addresses this research gap giving specific attention to the fact that African countries are far from homogeneous evidenced by their highly diverse economic activities and varying levels of development The book is essential reading for scholars in the development economics discipline who have an interest in policy studies and in gaining a holistic appreciation of the employment effects of digital developments in Africa Such insights will go a long way towards shaping countries economic and digital policies and putting the continent onto a steadier path towards its digital future

Indian Economic Review ,2006 Africa's digital future Ali Parry,Susara J. Jansen van Rensburg,2021-12-31 The main thrust of this book is to examine whether Africa is in a position to benefit from the digital age given the continent s many development challenges and slow adoption of digital technologies While there is substantial literature on the digital economy and the quickening pace of the Fourth Industrial Revolution 4IR comparatively little research has been conducted on what the digital age means for Africa This book aims to close this research gap by using various qualitative and quantitative research methodologies to arrive at a cross section of original findings and perspectives on how Africa can capitalise on the benefits of digital developments including their potential to create jobs and bring about more inclusive growth The book s main contribution is its coverage of a range of topics that will affect Africa s digital future including industrialisation global value chains transport and logistics trade facilitation labour market dynamics employment and education The theme of digital trade forms a backdrop to many of the chapters along with references to the COVID 19 pandemic The book acknowledges that although African countries should learn from international best practices they need to chart their own course according to their own particular circumstances By adopting a digital mindset countries should be able to diversify economically and extend their market reach across the continent Furthermore while Africa should be looking to the future and determining how digital technologies can become effective tools of sustainable development the continent has much catching up to do
