Ch 1: The Right to Exclude

Common Law Property Rights

- 1. Ownership is both a personal and real right
- 2. The right to exclude is principally a self-dependent security mechanism
 - o This central function has other consequences: excluded parties are not obliged to take any responsibility for any activities within their land or for any property.
- 3. Every person has a constitutional right to the peaceful enjoyment of his or her property for any purpose (subject to certain limits that applied until 2015)
 - o However, almost right immediately after accession, the constitutional provision is rarely invoked.

Constitutional

- 1. Ownership of real property does not include the right to use one's property in a manner excluded to the rest of society.
- 2. Unlike ownership, which includes exclusion, the state is always at pains to find some ground for intervention and provision.
 - o A restriction on the property is not a deprivation
- 3. Any employer may wish to use his or her own property in a way that is not in the public interest.
 - o These rights are not fundamental in the sense that they affect the state's own property and may require the state to take steps to prevent the exercise of these rights.

Exclusion is a deprivation of a person's ability to use his or her property in a way that is not in the public interest.

In Handberg v. Handberg, the court held that the state's right to use its property in a way that is not in the public interest is not a deprivation of the state's property.

- 1. Exclusion is a deprivation of the state's property.
