Beeby-Thompson, 1925 Energy Developments in the Middle East Anthony H. Cordesman, 2004-09-30 The Middle Eastern and North African region MENA dominates world energy exports today and will likely do so for decades to come even if world consumers make steady progress in conservation renewable energy sources and increases from gas coal and nuclear power The MENA region however has been the scene of both internal crises and external conflicts On several occasions

these crises have affected either the flow of MENA energy exports or the development of energy production and export capacity. The politics, economics, and social dynamics that shape threats to regional stability are complex. Cordesman details the factors behind these diverse forces and outlines current supply levels and future trends taking each of these variables into consideration. The MENA area includes at least 22 states with a combined population of nearly 300 million each with different political, economic, demographic, and security conditions and needs. It is divided into at least four sub-regions including the Maghreb (Mauritania, Morocco, Algeria, Libya, and Tunisia), the Levant, and the Arab-Israeli confrontation states (Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, and Syria), the Gulf (Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Bahrain, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, the UAE, and Oman), and the Red Sea states (Yemen, the Sudan, and Somalia). This important guide outlines the forces affecting each sub-region including supply, demand, and financing and forecasts the likely impact that different scenarios would have on energy resources under varying world conditions.

Optimal Oil Production and the World Supply of Oil Mr. Nikolay Aleksandrov, Mr. János Gyurko, Mr. Raphael A. Espinoza, 2012-12-17 We study the optimal oil extraction strategy and the value of an oil field using a multiple real option approach. The numerical method is flexible enough to solve a model with several state variables to discuss the effect of risk aversion and to take into account uncertainty in the size of reserves. Optimal extraction in the baseline model is found to be volatile. If the oil producer is risk averse, production is more stable but spare capacity is much higher than what is typically observed We show that decisions are very sensitive to expectations on the equilibrium oil price using a mean reverting model of the oil price where the equilibrium price is also a random variable Oil production was cut during the 2008 2009 crisis and we find that the cut in production was larger for OPEC for countries facing a lower discount rate as predicted by the model and for countries whose governments finances are less dependent on oil revenues However the net present value of a country s oil reserves would be increased significantly by 100 percent in the most extreme case if production was cut completely when prices fall below the country s threshold price If several producers were to adopt such strategies world oil prices would be higher but more stable      Small Business Problems Created by Petroleum Imports United States.
