

Unit 3: Acids and Bases

This unit activity will help you meet these essential learning goals:

- 1. Balance Equations—You will explore the chemical acids, bases, and neutralization reactions, including their balancing and the synthesis and neutralization reactions. You will also determine what acids are responsible for
- 2. Classify Acids—You will employ solubility for reactions and products.

Introduction

Acids and bases are common to most other biological and environmental systems. They make solutions acidic and determine the products of neutralization reactions. The process of neutralization can be used to determine the concentration of an unknown acid or base by reacting it with an acid or base of known concentration. Similarly, acids, bases, and neutralization reactions are used to analyze unknown substances and identify unknown species.

- Is the compound acid or a base?
- Is the compound strong or weak?

In this activity, you will explore the various substances containing acids and bases and describe the chemical properties that they have. You will also describe how different conditions can affect acid-base reactions and determine which factors play a role in acid-base reactions, as well as identifying and writing neutralization reactions. You will also describe how to determine the concentration of an unknown substance and how to use solubility rules to predict the products of acid-base reactions. You will also apply the acid-base concept.

Objectives and Analysis

Task 1: Acids and Bases in real world applications

Many reactions happen every day around us. Some are acid-base reactions, neutralization reactions, synthesis reactions, decomposition reactions, redox reactions, and combustion reactions. Some reactions involve acids and bases, including acid-base reactions.

- 1. Explore the various acids and bases and their chemical and physical properties and the formation of acid rain. Determine how acids react with different components of our building chemical structures.
