

The Urinary System

The urinary system is responsible for filtering waste from the blood, maintaining fluid balance, and regulating blood pressure. It consists of two kidneys, two ureters, a bladder, and a urethra. The kidneys are located in the back of the body, on either side of the spine. The ureters are tubes that carry urine from the kidneys to the bladder. The bladder is a sac-like organ that stores urine until it is ready to be expelled from the body through the urethra.

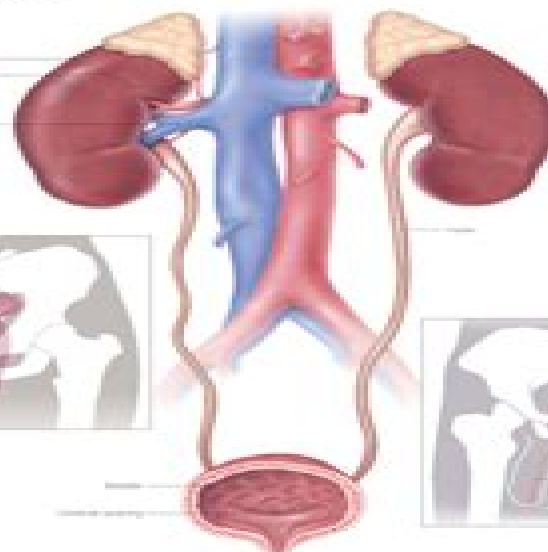

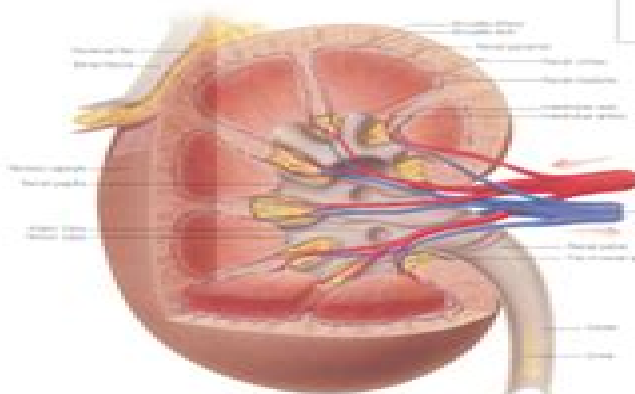

The urinary system is also responsible for maintaining the body's fluid balance. It does this by filtering out excess fluid and waste from the blood. The kidneys also play a role in regulating blood pressure by releasing a hormone called renin. Renin helps to control the production of a hormone called angiotensin, which in turn helps to regulate blood pressure.

Structure of the kidneys

The kidneys are located in the back of the body, on either side of the spine. They are bean-shaped organs that are about 10 cm long and 5 cm wide. The kidneys are covered by a layer of fat called the renal capsule. The renal capsule is made of two layers: an outer layer called the fibrous capsule and an inner layer called the glomerular capsule. The glomerular capsule is made of two layers: an outer layer called the parietal capsule and an inner layer called the visceral capsule. The space between the two layers of the glomerular capsule is called the Bowman's space. The Bowman's space is where the glomerulus is located. The glomerulus is a cluster of small blood vessels called glomeruli. The glomeruli are connected to the rest of the body by a network of blood vessels called the renal vasculature.

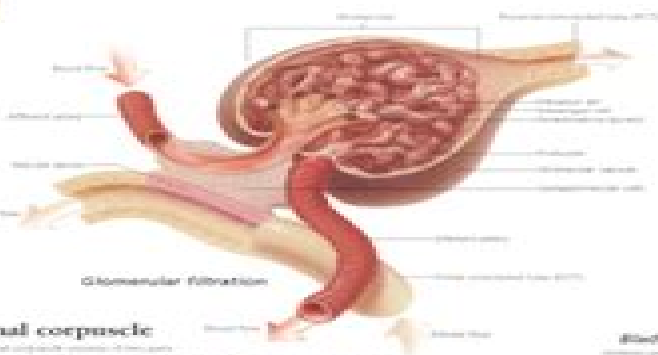

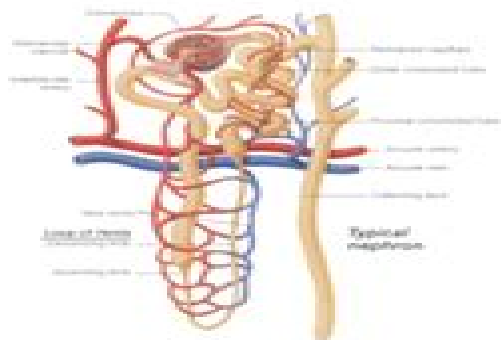

Functions of the kidneys

The kidneys have several functions. They filter waste from the blood, maintain fluid balance, and regulate blood pressure. They also produce hormones that help to regulate the body's metabolism and bone health.

The nephron

The nephron is the basic functional unit of the kidney. It is responsible for filtering waste from the blood and maintaining fluid balance. Each kidney contains about 1 million nephrons. The nephron is made up of a renal corpuscle and a renal tubule. The renal corpuscle is made up of a glomerulus and a Bowman's capsule. The glomerulus is a cluster of small blood vessels called glomeruli. The Bowman's capsule is made of two layers: an outer layer called the parietal capsule and an inner layer called the visceral capsule. The space between the two layers of the Bowman's capsule is called the Bowman's space. The Bowman's space is where the glomerulus is located. The renal tubule is a long, coiled tube that carries urine from the Bowman's space to the collecting duct. The collecting duct is a larger tube that carries urine from the renal tubule to the bladder.

Renal corpuscle

The renal corpuscle is the part of the nephron that filters blood.

The renal corpuscle is made up of a glomerulus and a Bowman's capsule.

The glomerulus is a cluster of small blood vessels called glomeruli. The Bowman's capsule is made of two layers: an outer layer called the parietal capsule and an inner layer called the visceral capsule. The space between the two layers of the Bowman's capsule is called the Bowman's space. The Bowman's space is where the glomerulus is located.

The renal corpuscle is responsible for filtering waste from the blood and maintaining fluid balance. It does this by filtering out excess fluid and waste from the blood. The kidneys also play a role in regulating blood pressure by releasing a hormone called renin. Renin helps to control the production of a hormone called angiotensin, which in turn helps to regulate blood pressure.

Filtrate formation

How urine is produced

The kidneys produce about 1.5 liters of urine each day. Urine is produced by the nephrons. Each nephron filters about 120 ml of blood each minute. The filtrate that is produced by the nephrons is called the filtrate. The filtrate is then carried by the renal tubule to the collecting duct. The collecting duct is a larger tube that carries urine from the renal tubule to the bladder. The bladder is a sac-like organ that stores urine until it is ready to be expelled from the body through the urethra.

Any stages of urine formation

- Glomerular filtration - Filtering of water, waste products, salts, glucose and other chemicals.
- Tubular reabsorption - Reabsorption of useful substances back to the bloodstream.
- Tubular secretion - Secretion of waste materials from capillaries into the renal tubule for removal with the urine.
