Northwest

The Northwest was at the center of industrialization during the First Industrial Revolution. It contained the leading industrial regions in the Second Industrial Revolution, New York, Massachusetts, and Pennsylvania produced more than 50 percent of all U.S. industrial products in 1890.

Almost 300,000 miles of railroad lines interconnected in the Northwest by 1890. The growth of railroads created a network of supporting industries. Perhaps more than any other, the social, political, and economic differences between the rich and poor were highlighted for industrial growth. Workers without better wages and working conditions. Labor unions formed first in the United States. Miners and manufacturers were some of the first workers to take their action as a bargaining tool against business owners.
