Sunday Jean Stafford,2017-04-04 Probably the best young prose writer in the U S as Time once called her Jean Stafford made a selection of her favorite among the stories she published in The New Yorker and elsewhere since 1944 Children Are Bored on Sunday displays at its height the mordant wit and sensibility which has distinguished Miss Stafford s work since her first successful novel Boston Adventure appeared in 1944 The stories in this book vary in mood from the title piece a satirical examination of avant garde intellectual life in New York through the eyes of a self styled rube to the quietly affecting novella The Home Front about a German doctor in an American defense plant town The backgrounds of the stories are equally varied one is set in the Virgin Islands two in Germany one in Oklahoma and one in Maine and one The Interior Castle in the featureless ether smelling world of a hospital where the heroine is recovering after a near fatal accident The central figure of one story is a fat girl who imagines herself to be twins and who cannot stop eating in another we meet Jim Littlefield an orphan Indian boy of 8 who has come on the train barefoot all the way from Missouri In The Bleeding Heart appears an invalid old lady whose speech has lost its verbs I her she cries while her parrot aged 48 has lost all speech but the eternally reiterated Just a minute The versatile forms of these stories ranging from satire to interior monologues from pathos to grotesquerie are carried out in a style so consistently controlled so full of imaginative power and so alive to nuance both verbal and pictorial that the collection takes on a compelling unity in its very diversity and will add to the already impressive reputation Miss Stafford s three novels have won her      Teacher Inquiries in Literacy Teaching-Learning Christine C. Pappas,Liliana Barro Zecker,Liliana Zecker,2001-01-01 This book consists of the reports of 13 urban elementary teacher researchers year long inquiries around literacy topics conducted as part of a collaborative school university action research project The focus is on how they attempted to transform their teaching practices to meet the needs of students from diverse ethnic and linguistic backgrounds and how their inquiry efforts resulted in developing more collaborative styles of teaching These teachers explore how collaborative classroom interactions occur when teachers move away from teaching as transmission approaches to ones in which they share power and authority with their students viewing them not as at risk but instead as at promise Because the everyday interactions between teachers and students are realized by social talk in the classroom classroom discourse was analyzed to study and document the teacher researchers efforts to make changes in the locus of power in literacy teaching and learning Their chapters are filled with classroom discourse examples to illustrate their points The volume includes teacher inquiries conducted in elementary classrooms from kindergarten through eighth grade Three took place in bilingual classrooms one in a special education class These inquiries cover a range of literacy topics including reading aloud language richness writing literature discussion groups drama and pretend reading The background and theoretical underpinnings of the project are discussed in an introduction written by the editors in the conclusion they
