Part Four: Circulatory System

The general structure of the circulatory system of the rat is almost identical to that of humans. Pulmonary circulation carries blood through the lungs for oxygenation and then back to the heart. Systematic circulation moves oxygenated blood through the body after it has left the heart.

1. Observe the interior of the rat for any veins and arteries. Veins carry used blood (blue) back to the heart and lungs. Arteries carry oxygenated blood to the muscles and organs that need it. The arteries in your rat should be stained red for easy identification. Use Figures 3 and 4 to help you locate the major veins and arteries.

2. Locate the heart which is covered in a thin, tough membrane called the pericardium.

3. Proceed slowly and cautiously with this next step. Remove the heart from the pericardial sac. You will need to sever the arteries and veins connecting the heart to the circulatory system. Leave as many of the veins and arteries attached to the heart as possible.

4. Identify the aorta, the superior vena cava and pulmonary artery.

5. Cut the heart in half through the frontal plane using a sharp blade. The heart is composed of four chambers. Use Figure 5 to help you locate the 2 atria and 2 ventricles. You may also notice the septum. It is the structure that separates the two ventricles.
