Danfoss

USER'S GUIDE

How to:

Select a 12 hour or a 24 hour clock display.

Select a °C or a °F temperature display.

Change between Winter Time and Summer Time at the press of a button.

Convert the TP75-RF to act as a thermostat, controlling at the selected temperature continuously.

Use the TP75-RF as a frost thermostat.

Use the holiday function.

Override the programmed temperature.

Extend an existing temperature for 1, 2 or 3 hours.

Heating System Performance.

The TP75-RF includes one in-built and two optional energy saving and comfort enhancement features that may have been enabled by your installer. All will affect the way in which the heating system operates, and this will be different from that provided by conventional time controls and room thermostats.

The in-built feature is an intelligent electronic anticipator which measures the rate of temperature rise then switches the boiler off before the set temperature is reached. However the required comfort temperature will be reached due to the residual heat in the system after the boiler has shut down. This feature is only activated when the room temperature is 4°F or more lower than the set temperature.

If the optional Optimum Start Control feature has been enabled, (indicated by the display showing typically 0-30 and OP after the second press of the PROG button from the RUN mode), then the boiler will fire some time before the programmed event 1 time to provide the event 1 comfort temperature by that time.

If the optional Chrono-proportional feature has been enabled, then the boiler will fire at regular intervals to maintain radiator temperature and so prevent the large swings in room temperature caused by radiators alternating between very hot and cold. In mild weather and when the system is up to temperature the boiler may fire only in short bursts with long periods of inactivity. This is not a fault, and will provide increased comfort.

RUN MODE

Whilst the TP75-RF is in RUN mode, i.e. controlling the space temperature in accordance with the programme, the colon between the hours and minutes digits blinks. The colon does not blink whilst the time and programme are being set.
