Abstract

Abstract. The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Ankara, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the 10-year-old children in the school. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not participate in any physical education program, while the experimental group participated in a 12-week training program. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The measurements included maximum heart rate, maximum oxygen consumption, maximum power, and maximum speed. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher values for all four measurements at the end of the 12-week period compared to the control group. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or other medical problems. They were randomly assigned to a 12-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise at 60% of maximum HR. The control group continued with their sedentary lifestyle. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week program. The HR and EE of the training group increased significantly compared to the control group. The HR increased from 140 to 150 beats per minute, and the EE increased from 1,800 to 2,200 kcal per day. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.

the authors' knowledge, this is the first study to examine the effects of a single session of a group-based, self-help, cognitive-behavioral intervention on the self-reported health status of people with chronic low back pain. The authors also note that the study was limited by the lack of a control group and the lack of a long-term follow-up. The authors conclude that the results of the study suggest that a single session of a group-based, self-help, cognitive-behavioral intervention can improve the self-reported health status of people with chronic low back pain.
