

How to Write Body Paragraphs

BODY PARAGRAPHS

- ★ have a topic sentence that clearly connects to the essay's thesis.
- ★ provide a path from the introduction to the conclusion paragraph
- ★ give relevant examples and details to support the thesis (claim) of the essay.
- ★ must focus on only one major idea each. If a body paragraph gets too complex with more than one main idea, consider breaking it into more than one paragraph.
- ★ explain the ideas and prove the argument that is in the essay's thesis (claim)
- ★ relate to one another in a logical way. Use transition words to make these connections clear.

BODY PARAGRAPH STRUCTURE

- 1 Topic Sentence: This is the main idea of the paragraph, and it should be clear and concise. It supports the argument in the thesis. After reading the topic sentence, the reader should know exactly what the paragraph is about.
- 2 Context + Lead-in: This is a sentence or two that provides enough context for the reader to understand the quotation and/or evidence that follows.
- 3 Evidence: This is where the writer supplies arguments, quotes, data, and facts that support the idea in the topic sentence. This evidence needs to be from reputable sources.
