this important national experiment in transforming the environmental economic and social nature of today's dominant system of producing food

Al Campbell University of Utah As large scale industrial agriculture comes under increasing scrutiny because of its petroleum and petrochemical based input costs and environmentally objectionable consequences increasing attention has been focused on sustainable local and agro ecological techniques in food production Cuba was forced by historical circumstances to be one of the pioneers in the massive application of these techniques After the demise of the Soviet Union in the early 1990s Cuba was left without access to external support needed to carry on with industrial agriculture The economic crisis led the country to reconsider their former models of resource management Cuba retooled its agricultural programs to focus on urban agriculture sustainable ecologically sound farming close to densely populated areas Food now takes far less time to get to the people who are now better nourished because they have easier access to whole foods Moreover urban farming has become a source of national pride Cuba has one of the best urban agriculture programs in the world with a thousand fold increase in urban agricultural output since 1994 Sinan Koont has spent the last several years researching urban agriculture in Cuba including field work at many sustainable farms on the island He tells the story of why and how Cuba was able to turn to urban food production on a large scale with minimal use of chemicals petroleum and machinery and of the successes it achieved along with the continuing difficulties it still faces in reducing its need for food imports Sinan Koont is associate professor of economics at Dickinson College A volume in the series Contemporary Cuba edited by John M Kirk Flight Information Manual, 1946 Official Gazette of the United States Patent and Trademark Office, 2001 Viajes y viajeros en la Europa medieval Joaquín M.
