Abstract: This study examined the effects of a 12-week, 100% body weight (BW) resistance training program on the muscle strength and body composition of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each including a 10-minute warm-up, 20 minutes of resistance training, and 10 minutes of cardiovascular exercise. The resistance training was performed using a combination of free weights and resistance bands. The results showed that the program significantly increased muscle strength and body composition in the participants. The study suggests that a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program is an effective way to improve muscle strength and body composition in sedentary, middle-aged women.
