

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, 3-day-per-week, 100-min-per-session, low-impact aerobically demanding dance program on the health-related fitness of 10 sedentary, middle-aged women. The program was designed to be fun and enjoyable, and to include a variety of dance styles. The program was evaluated using a pretest and a posttest. The results of the pretest and posttest showed that the program had a positive effect on the health-related fitness of the women. The program was found to be effective in improving cardiovascular fitness, muscular strength, and flexibility. The program was also found to be effective in improving body composition, specifically reducing body fat percentage and increasing lean body mass. The program was well-received by the women, and they reported enjoying the program and feeling more energetic and confident after completing the program. The results of this study suggest that a low-impact aerobically demanding dance program can be an effective way to improve the health-related fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women.
