

Prepared in cooperation with the Bureau of Land Management

Rangeland Condition Monitoring Assessment and Projection, 1985-2021

Description

In collaboration with the Bureau of Land Management (BLM), the U.S. Geological Survey has produced the first map of Rangeland Condition Monitoring (RCM) for the period 1985-2021 (27 years) as part of the Rangeland Condition Monitoring Assessment and Projection (RCMAP) project (BLM and others, 2023). RCMAP maps rangeland condition, including vegetation, soil, and other factors, and provides a baseline for monitoring change and assessing the impact of land use and management practices. RCMAP 1985-2021 maps were developed using data from the BLM's Rangeland Health Monitoring Program (RHMP) and other sources.

It documents how the Rangeland Condition Monitoring (RCM) project is implemented and provides a baseline for monitoring change and assessing the impact of land use and management practices.

Intended Use

Land managers and researchers use the RCMAP data to monitor and assess rangeland condition, including vegetation, soil, and other factors, and to provide a baseline for monitoring change and assessing the impact of land use and management practices. RCMAP data can be used to identify areas of concern, to assess the effectiveness of land management practices, and to provide a baseline for monitoring change and assessing the impact of land use and management practices.

Training Data

Training data are extracted from the RCMAP data, including field observations and field data, and are used to train the RCMAP model. Training data are used to evaluate the model's performance and to provide a baseline for monitoring change and assessing the impact of land use and management practices.

Independent Data

Training data are used to train the RCMAP model, and independent data are used to evaluate the model's performance. Independent data are used to provide a baseline for monitoring change and assessing the impact of land use and management practices.
