

Woodrow Wilson's

14 Points

The Fourteen Points was a speech delivered by United States President Woodrow Wilson to Congress during WWI on January 8, 1918. The address was intended to assure the U.S. that the Great War was being fought for a just cause and for postwar peace in Europe. Citizens in Europe generally welcomed Wilson's ideas, but Allied leaders were skeptical of the possibility of the ideas happening.

The speech was delivered over ten months before the armistice with the German Empire ended the Great War, but the Fourteen Points became the basis for the terms of the German surrender, as negotiated at the Paris Peace Conference in 1919. The Treaty of Versailles, however, had little to do with the Fourteen Points and so was never ratified by the U.S. Senate.

The Fourteen Points speech was the only explicit (open) statement of war goals by any of the nations fighting in World War I: some countries involved gave general indications of their goals; still others secretly wanted to gain foreign territory and so refused to state their goals openly. Many secret deals were made between nations that made accepting Wilson's points impossible.

Woodrow Wilson's Fourteen Points simplified from his original speech:

1. All treaties between countries must be made public with no secret agreements for all nations to observe.
2. Freedom of navigation upon the seas, outside territorial waters, during both peace and war, except as those seas may be closed in whole or in part by international action for the enforcement of international agreements.
3. The removal of economic barriers between countries making trade unfair among all the nations consenting to the peace and associating themselves for the maintenance of peace.
4. The reduction of arms worldwide to the lowest point consistent with maintaining domestic (home) safety.
5. An open-minded adjustment of all colonial claims, based upon the principle that in determining all such questions of rule the interests of the populations involved must have equal say with the claims of the government who is involved.
6. The evacuation of Central Power armed forces of all Russian territory.
7. The evacuation of Central Power armed forces from Belgium.
8. All French territory should be freed and the invaded portions restored to France, including lands lost by France (Alsace-Lorraine territory) during the Franco-Prussian War in 1871 (Germany was formally known as Prussia).
9. A readjustment of the borders of Italy should be effected along clearly recognizable lines of Italian nationality.
10. The peoples of Austria-Hungary should be given the freest opportunity to autonomous (self-chosen) government.
11. Romania, Serbia, and Montenegro should be evacuated by all Central Power armed forces; occupied territories restored; Serbia given free and permanent access to the sea.
12. The peoples of the Ottoman Empire should be given a voice in determining their own self-government.
13. An independent Polish nation should be created which should include the territories inhabited by indisputably Polish populations, including free access to the sea.
14. A League of Nations formed so that representatives of all participating nations can peacefully settle disputes without resorting to armed conflict, and that the League of Nations will help protect the freedom of participating nations who are threatened by others.

Questions:

1. What was the goal of President Wilson's Fourteen Points Speech?
2. Why wasn't the Treaty of Versailles ratified by the United States?
