Personal Engineering & Instrumentation News ,1990      The Journal of the Acoustical Society of America
Acoustical Society of America,2001      Microwave Journal ,1994      Self-esteem as Reflected in Human Figure Drawing Steven R. Hand,1979      Human Figure Drawing as a Measure of Self-esteem Abby L. MacKinnel,2015 The construct of self esteem is a significant aspect of an individual s sense of worth thus shaping attitudes and behavior about the self Projective art techniques can reflect the individual s self concept in various ways In the present study the Human Figure Drawing HFD created by Koppitz 1968 was utilized to determine if the size of the drawn figure is an effective measure of self esteem Participants in this study included 47 undergraduate students Figure height and area were measured from the HFD and self esteem was measured by using the Rosenberg Self Esteem Scale RSSE Rosenberg 1965 It was expected that larger and taller figure drawings would correlate with higher self esteem scores Results for this studey were not significant but other trends were noted Individuals who scored in the high range for self esteem were much more likely to include teeth in their figure drawings Additionally there were weak correlations noted in an exploratory analysis based on gender      Using the Draw-a-person Test to Rate Self-esteem in Dually Diagnosed Psychiatric Inpatients Ellen Szumigala,2003 This study examined the ability of projective drawings to measure self esteem A rating scale developed for the Machover Draw A Person D A P test was used to determine if specific indicators identified in the literature on projective drawings are able to measure self esteem Twenty dually diagnosed in patients were tested The results of the D A P ratings made by two graduate students of art therapy and one art therapist were evaluated for inter rater reliability and then correlated with the results of the Rosenberg Self Esteem Scale RSES Results showed moderate inter rater reliability and suggested that three of the D A P self esteem indicators correlate well together The correlation between D A P scores and self reported self esteem fell short of statistical significance However when only the three more reliable indicators were used a trend toward a significant relationship was found Although the reults of this study are inconclusive the D A P shows promise for rating self esteem in psychiatric and substance abuse settings
