† Effects depending on the other independent variable.

10. The following are the main types of metamorphic rocks and the conditions under which they form:
- 10.1 Schist: Formed under medium to high pressure and temperature. Characterized by a foliated texture with visible mineral grains.
  - 10.2 Gneiss: Formed under high pressure and temperature. Characterized by a banded or foliated texture with alternating layers of light and dark minerals.
  - 10.3 Quartzite: Formed under high pressure and temperature. Characterized by a crystalline texture with interlocking quartz grains.
  - 10.4 Marble: Formed under low to medium pressure and high temperature. Characterized by a crystalline texture with large grains of calcite or dolomite.
  - 10.5 Slate: Formed under low pressure and low to medium temperature. Characterized by a fine-grained, foliated texture.
  - 10.6 Phyllite: Formed under low to medium pressure and low to medium temperature. Characterized by a fine-grained, foliated texture with wavy bedding.
  - 10.7 Mylonite: Formed under high pressure and low to medium temperature. Characterized by a fine-grained, foliated texture with a high proportion of plagioclase and quartz.
  - 10.8 Amphibolite: Formed under high pressure and low to medium temperature. Characterized by a fine-grained, foliated texture with a high proportion of amphibole and plagioclase.
  - 10.9 Eclogite: Formed under high pressure and low to medium temperature. Characterized by a fine-grained, foliated texture with a high proportion of garnet and omphacite.
  - 10.10 Kyanite: Formed under high pressure and low to medium temperature. Characterized by a fine-grained, foliated texture with a high proportion of kyanite and plagioclase.

- Abstract: There is a widespread notion among US economists that budget deficits are bad and that government spending is bad. This chapter takes the opposite view. It argues that the US government has been too small and that it should be bigger. It also argues that the US government should spend more on social programs, especially on education, health care, and social security. The chapter also discusses the role of government in the economy and the importance of government intervention in the economy. It concludes that government intervention is necessary to achieve a more equitable and efficient economy.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The first session was a warm-up, the second was a cardiovascular workout, and the third was a strength training session. The results showed that the women who participated in the program experienced significant improvements in their physical and psychological health. Specifically, there were significant increases in heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index (BMI). Additionally, there were significant decreases in anxiety and depression scores. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can have a positive impact on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
