South Africa The Struggle For A New Order:

South Africa Marina Ottaway, 2010-12-01 The unbanning of the African National Congress and the release of Nelson Mandela in February of 1990 cleared the way for negotiations toward a new post apartheid political order in South Africa But three years later the main parties have made little progress toward a compromise while violence escalates in the townships In this revealing study Marina Ottaway examines the new conflicts emerging in South Africa the factors influencing them and the probable outcome She shows that the black on white conflict that has made the country a pariah in the past has evolved into a much more complex state of affairs and explains that the transition is likely to take an unprecedented form Beginning with a brief history of the events since Mandela's release Ottaway provides a vivid account of the evolving conflict over apartheid She discusses the complexity of conflict resolution in a country where internal and external currents work against each other and where the struggle for power transcends any strides toward peace Ottaway thoroughly addresses the issues involved in South Africa's transition from apartheid She explains that the abolition of the pervasive system has more far reaching implications than originally thought South Africa explores the effects that the international climate of the 1990s has had on the country's transition Ottaway contends that the international community rejects apartheid but is unsympathetic to black demands for redistribution and has condemned the white government's vision of separate development but accepts ethnic nationalism as inevitable She describes the dramatic effects the new world order has had on South Africa and assesses what those changes will mean to the country's difficult transition

Broadcasting the End of Apartheid Martha Evans, 2014-07-15 South Africa came late to television when it finally arrived in the late 1970s the rest of the world had already begun to boycott the country because of apartheid While the ruling National Party feared the integrative effects of television they did not foresee how exclusion from globally unifying broadcasts would gradually erode their power South Africa was barred from participating in some of television's greatest global attractions including sporting events such as the Olympics and contests such as Miss World With the release of Nelson Mandela from prison came a proliferation of large scale live broadcasts as the country was permitted to return to international competition and its re-admittance was played out on television screens across the world These events were pivotal in shaping and consolidating the country's emerging post apartheid national identity Broadcasting the End of Apartheid assesses the socio-political effects of live broadcasting on South Africa's transition to democracy Martha Evans argues that just as print media had a powerful influence on the development of Afrikaner nationalism so the liveness of television helped to consolidate the post apartheid South African national identity

The New Order of War, 2010-01-01 Far from heralding a time of unprecedented peace the end of actually existing communism served to usher in new conflicts new wars and new reasons for war That much goes without saying What is controversial however is how we might understand and respond to these new wars This book offers a new approach Its distinctive and multidisciplinary range of perspectives offering quite different views is based on the conviction that if we are to begin to get to grips with this central feature of our 21st Century lives we have to go beyond an unhelpful moralism on the one hand and a defeatist appeal to human nature on the other

Revisiting Regionalism and the Contemporary World Order Élise Féron, Jyrki Kähkönen, Gabriel Rached, 2019-10-28 The book critically analyzes the ongoing changes in the regional intra regional and global dynamics of cooperation from a multi disciplinary and pluralist perspective It is based on the insight that in a post hegemonic world the formation of regions and the process of globalization can be largely disconnected from the orbit of the US and that a plurality of power and worldviews has replaced US hegemony In spite of these changes most existing analyses of current changes in the world order still rely upon Western centered approaches and Westphalian thinking Against this backdrop the book proposes to advance a truly global IR understanding of the post hegemonic world and weaves together the pluralist and multi disciplinary perspectives of scholars located all around the world
