molecular structure of humic substances and its relationship with a plurality of physiological responses and signalling networks triggered in plants several functional aspects still need to be clarified One major issue is that humic substances possess a very complex structure which accounts for their multifaceted biological action Therefore this Research Topic aims to update the knowledge on humic substances by improving the current understanding of their structure and interactions with plants and associated rhizosphere microorganisms thus shining light on the mechanisms and cellular signalling pathways through which humic substances target specific plant metabolic routes and elicit physiological responses Implications of such interactions are expected to be assessed using differential methodological approaches under either small scale trials or field conditions in view of developing advanced and sustainable agriculture technologies aimed at improving crop yield and food quality

Facing stressful conditions imposed by their environment and affecting their growth and their development throughout their life cycle plants must be able to perceive to process and to translate different stimuli into adaptive responses Understanding the organism coordinated responses involves a fine description of the mechanisms occurring at the cellular and molecular level A major challenge is also to understand how the large diversity of molecules identified as signals sensors or effectors could drive a cell to the appropriate plant response and to finally cope with various environmental cues In this Research Topic we aim to provide an overview of various signaling mechanisms or to present new molecular signals involved in stress response and to demonstrate how basic fundamental research on cell signaling will help to understand stress responses at the whole plant level
