

Philippine Foreign Policy (PHILFOR)
2nd Term AY 2014-2015
S.C. Madrona, Jr., Ph.D.

Course Description

This course includes literature on foreign policy analysis and Philippine foreign policy. The course is intended to introduce students to some of the major theoretical explanations of how states conduct their foreign policies, arranged in terms of the levels of analysis framework – external approaches related to broad international relations theories, governmental-organizational approach, societal approaches in terms of diversionary theory of war and public opinion and interest groups, and individual psychological approach to foreign policy. Prior to discussing Philippine foreign policy, the course will examine how the foreign policy making of developing states have been discussed in the literature. The course focuses more on the decision-making instead of foreign policy outputs, examining the various actors involved in the process, the nature of their interactions and the constraints facing them in the formulation of foreign policy.

Course Objectives

At the end of this course, the student should be able:

1. To characterize and differentiate periods of Philippine diplomatic history, and to know what each period has contributed to the development of Philippine foreign policy.
2. To identify the sources of change and stability in foreign policy formulation and implementation.
3. To analyze foreign policy prerogatives both in the governmental and nongovernmental sector and situate them in the foreign policy process
