Learning Goal

To understand how the trajectory of an object depends on its initial velocity, and to understand how air resistance affects the trajectory.

For this problem, use the PhET simulation Projectile Motion. This simulation allows you to fire an object from a cannon, set its trajectory, and measure its range and hang time (the amount of time it is in the air).

Start the simulation. Press Fire to launch an object. You can choose the object by clicking on one of the objects in the dropdown menu, drag, and drop it into the cannon barrel. To adjust the cannon barrel's angle, click and drag on the angle slider. You can also adjust the speed, mass, and position of the object by typing in values. (Using the Reset button resets all settings for the simulation.) For this tutorial, launch an object at an angle of 30° (you can set the angle by clicking on the angle slider or by typing in the value 30 in the angle input field).

Play around with the simulation. When you are done, click Close and proceed to the next part of the tutorial.

Part A

First, you will investigate purely vertical motion. The kinematic equation for vertical motion (ignoring air resistance) is given by

$$y(t) = y_0 + v_0 t - \frac{1}{2} g t^2,$$

where $y_0 = 0$ is the initial position (what is 0.0 is above the ground) due to the effects of the cannon, v_0 is the initial speed, and g is the acceleration due to gravity.

Shoot the baseball straight upward (at an angle of 90°) with an initial speed of 20 m/s.

How long does it take for the baseball to hit the ground?

Express your answer with the appropriate units.
