The purpose of the Salts & Solubility Recreation is to permit understudies to investigate how distinctive salts break up in the water and how components such as temperature and concentration influence the solvency of salts. Through the reenactment, understudies can control different factors and watch the impacts on the disintegration preparation, making a difference in them getting a handle on the basic standards of solvency and arrangement.

The conclusion is that different salts have shifting degrees of solvency in water. A few salts break down promptly, whereas others have restricted solvency or may not break down at all beneath certain conditions.

The screenshot shows the PhET Salts & Solubility simulation window. The title bar reads "Salts & Solubility (1.06)". The menu bar includes "File" and "Help". The main interface has three tabs: "Table Salt", "Slightly Soluble Salts", and "Design a Salt". The "Design a Salt" tab is currently selected. The central area displays a 3D representation of a salt container pouring small, multi-colored spheres (representing ions) into a blue rectangular tank. On the left side of the tank, there are two yellow faucets. On the right side, a vertical scale bar is marked with values from 1.0×10^{23} to 8.0×10^{23} in increments of 1.0×10^{23} . The tank itself is filled with these small spheres. To the right of the main simulation area, there is a control panel. It has a "Salt" section with two columns: "Ions" and "Chloride". Under "Ions", there is a red dot and the word "Sodium". Under "Chloride", there is a green dot. Below this, there are input fields for "Dissolved", "Bound", and "Total". The "Dissolved" field has a value of 24, "Bound" has 0, and "Total" has 24. Below these is a "Water" section with a "Volume" field set to 7.125×10^{-23} liters (L). At the bottom of the control panel is a "Reset All" button. At the bottom of the simulation window, there are two circular buttons: a blue one with a pause symbol and a grey one with a play symbol.
