

METHODS FOR TRAINING RESTAURANT STAFF

INSTRUCTING

This is a personal form of training. Employees are given instructions in writing, verbally or audio format. It is used to demonstrate a task, without any conversation. It is useful for reinforcing a portion of training that is necessary for the job.

DEMONSTRATING

It can be done in person or through video and it involves a demonstrator performing the tasks that the new employees must learn. It is one of the best teaching methods because employees learn by seeing and doing rather than just reading or hearing.

SHADOWING

A course of a formal accompanying a more experienced employee and observing him as they perform their regular duties. It exposes the employee to the real-world scenario. This can turn into a lesson to the experienced employee as some resources tend to use the wrong method and vice versa.

NEW DRINKS

In this method, a peer reviewer is assigned to every new manuscript. The reviewer usually an expert in the area and trains every employee the same way every time. This type of training takes up some of the weight of the manager.

SUPERVISION

This method consists of the trainee performing work under close supervision. It allows the trainer to correct on the fly and observe the trainee progress. It is a method usually employed before the trainee can proceed to work on his own.

ROLE-PLAYING

In role-playing, employees perform their duties with the teacher playing the role of a customer. This method gives the insured the chance to experience the pressure and potential tensions he will encounter in the job. This technique helps build confidence and experience, and is useful to assess the trainee's level of job skill.

MYSTERY SHOPPER

This technique is mainly used for ongoing training and performance monitoring. A mystery shopper comes to the restaurant and after they eat they fill in a standard food item questionnaire. Issues are clarified, details are verified, and the information is fed back to the restaurant manager. The results are incorporated into and disseminated with the staff.
