These facilities, that responsible refrigerant practices are required to the environment, and industry, and the air conditioning industry. All technicians who handle refrigerants must be certified according to local rules. For the EPA, the Federal Code of Air Section 608 sets both the requirements for training, testing, licensing and handling of various refrigerants and the equipment that is used in these service procedures. In addition, some states in cooperation may have additional requirements that must also be adhered to. Responsible management of refrigerants from the installation phase until filling time.

Excessive falls from roofs could result in death or serious injury. All fall-arresting devices for performing roofing operations, regardless whether you are working inside or outside, must meet OSHA's fall protection standards. To meet these standards, you should follow requirements for fall-arrest equipment and providing or installing a fall arrest system.
