

Phylogenetic Trees

The saying "Don't judge a book by its cover" could be applied to the topic of evolution. For example, humans share 75% of their DNA with chickens. Biologists point to this as evidence that humans and chickens once shared a common ancestor, which refers to an (usually) extinct organism that is an ancestor of two different organisms (extinct or modern). The advent of DNA technology has given scientists the tools with which to examine how closely related certain species are. DNA analysis allows scientist to construct phylogenetic trees whose branches link together the relatedness of different organisms. In a phylogenetic tree, each node with descendants represents the inferred most recent common ancestor of the descendants and the branch lengths in some trees may be interpreted as time estimates.

Figure 1 displays a phylogenetic tree that shows the relatedness of raccoons, pandas, and bears. Figure 2 displays the amino acid sequence of the cytochrome c protein, a protein involved in cellular respiration, for several different species. Cytochrome c is a protein found in many organisms due to its vital role in cellular respiration. Over time (billions of years) mutations have occurred in the cytochrome c gene that do not affect the function of the cytochrome c protein. These mutations are called neutral mutations. By looking at these mutations scientists can predict when the organisms diverged from a common ancestor and from each other.
