The Social Psychology of Procedural Justice E.Allan Lind, Tom R. Tyler, 2013-06-29 We dedicate this book to John Thibaut He was mentor and personal friend to one of us and his work had a profound intellectual influence on both of us We were both strongly influenced by Thibaut's insightful articulation of the importance to psychology of the concept of procedural justice and by his empirical work with Laurens Walker in reactions to legal institutions demonstrating the role of procedural justice The great importance we accord the Thibaut and

Walker work is evident throughout this volume If anyone person can be said to have created an entire field of inquiry John Thibaut created the psychological study of procedural justice To honor Thibaut thus in no sense reduces our recognition of the contributions of his co worker Laurens Walker in the creation of the field We are as certain that Walker would endorse our statement as we are that Thibaut with characteristic modesty would demur from it Even to praise Thibaut in this fashion falls short of recognizing all of his contributions to procedural justice Not only did he initiate the psychological study of the topic he also built much of the intellectual foundation upon which the study of procedural justice rests Thibaut's work with Harold Kelley 1959 Kelley Thibaut 1978 created a social psychological theory of interdependence that among many other applications serves as the basis for one of the major models of the psychology of procedural justice

Feelings James D. Laird, 2007-01-11 Feelings argues for the counterintuitive idea that feelings do not cause behavior but rather follow from behavior and are in fact the way that we know about our own bodily states and behaviors This point of view often associated with William James is called self perception theory Self perception theory can be empirically tested by manipulating bodily states and behaviors in order to see if the corresponding feelings are produced In this volume James D Laird presents hundreds of studies all demonstrating that feelings do indeed follow from behavior Behaviors that have been manipulated include facial expressions of emotion autonomic arousal actions gaze and postures The feelings that have been induced include happiness anger fear romantic love liking disliking hunger and feelings of familiarity These feelings do not feel like knowledge because they are knowledge by acquaintance such as the knowledge we have of how an apple tastes rather than verbal knowledge by description such as the knowledge that apples are red round and edible Many professional theories of human behavior as well as common sense explain actions by an appeal to feelings as causes Laird argues to the contrary that if feelings are information about behaviors that are already ongoing feelings cannot be causes and that the whole mechanistic model of human behavior as caused in this sense seems mistaken He proposes an alternative cybernetic model involving hierarchically stacked control systems In this model feelings provide feedback to the control systems and in a further elaboration this model suggests that the stack of control systems matches a similar stack of levels of organization of the world An original contribution to the study of the relationship between feelings and behavior the volume will be of interest to social emotional and cognitive psychologists
