

- If you want to gain fluency quickly, you need to commit to practicing every day.
- Learning a new language is based on repetition, so if you wait too long between study sessions, you will forget everything you learned previously and have to start all over again, wasting valuable time.
- However, you shouldn't study so much that you grow sick of English -- try to keep things interesting by completing a different task each day - one day of reading, one day of listening comprehension, one day of writing practice, one day studying grammar, etc.
- However, you should never pass up an opportunity to practice speaking English, as this is the number one most important thing you can do to gain fluency.
