✓ Exclusively available on IvyPanda

The theory of structural functionalism define social institutions to be a collective whole necessary to fulfill the various needs of individuals and centers on the means by which these institutions meet their social needs. Structural functionalism says that for societies to survive they have to be stable and cohesive and this comes from solidarity. However, the conflict theory believes that a society runs on competition rather than solidarity and social harmony. It views society to be full of inequalities, which creates change and conflicts among all.

Structural functionalism emphasizes more on social order instead of social change unlike the conflict theory, which believes that fundamental changes and conflicts are unavoidable in a society. Structural functionalism believed that an individual is simply an occupant of his social role and are thus, not significant as only themselves but just because of their social roles and status. Thus, while structural functionalism believes that social inequality and oppression may be necessary for the stability, integration and functioning of a society, the conflict theory holds exploitation by dominant groups to be the main reason for social problems.

Although both these theories have dissimilar value orientations, they have the same perception about inequality, which is that the dominant groups profit from discrimination. Structural functionalism says that discrimination fits perfectly in a society since it yields positive results but the conflict theory says that social changes are inevitable and will take place continuously and rapidly since the various social groups are striving to take, each other's place in our societal hierarchy. (Fararo, 2001)

Structural functionalism says that when a society becomes complex differentiation takes place and integration takes place among the new institutions. Thus, even though changes occur structures inside a society emerge to compensate for the change. These new integrated structures guarantee the smooth running of our society and thus, it argues that the members are responsible for its stability and order. However, the conflict theory says that the probability of change is embedded in the basic structures and relations among the classes of our society. Therefore, when we reach a point where

Than Aye,2020-08-27 Akademische Arbeit aus dem Jahr 2012 im Fachbereich Soziologie Allgemeines und Grundlagen Sprache Deutsch Abstract This paper examines different aspects of sociology and education conflict theory and stratification In the broadest perspective education refers to all efforts to impart knowledge and shape values hence it has essentially the same meaning as socialization However when sociologists speak of education they generally use a more specific meaning the deliberate process outside the family by which societies transmit knowledge values and norms to prepare young people for adult roles and to a lesser extent prepare adults for new roles This process acquires institutional status when these activities make instruction the central defining purpose are differentiated from other social realms and involve defined roles of teacher and learner Schools exemplify this type of institutionalization The central insight of the sociology of education is that schools are socially embedded institutions that are crucially shaped by their social environment and crucially shape it The field encompasses both micro and macro sociological concerns in diverse subfields such as stratification economic development socialization and the family organizations culture and the sociology of knowledge To understand modern society it is essential to understand the role of education Not only is education a primary agent of socialization and allocation modern societies have developed formidable ideologies that suggest that education should have this defining impact

Language, Literature, and the Dynamics of Conflict Eunice Ngongkum,Hans Fonka,2023-12-18
Informed by a global space animated by various conflicts this book brings a refreshing perspective on how the disciplines of literature and language engage this phenomenon In its shift from a purely political interrogation of conflict the volume provides a broad analytic canvas on which human behaviour in such contexts can be examined This is an ultimate invitation to a re visioning of socio cultural parameters of identity construction borders natural resources religion cultural values beliefs governance ideology and globalisation The book s varied perspective animated by a rich diversity of literary and linguistic approaches gives it an interdisciplinary emphasis that will appeal to readers across disciplines Its ultimate message is that conflict is not subject bound The liberal analysis of different aspects makes the volume an invaluable asset not only to literature and language scholars but also to everyone with inclinations towards conflict creation and management

Landscape Conflicts Karsten Berr,Lara Koegst,Olaf Kühne,2024-07-03 Landscape conflicts for example in connection with in view of the energy transition climate policy transport policy nature conservation the extraction of mineral raw materials the design of urban landscapes or tourism are potentially associated with high economic social and political costs even before a possible escalation It is therefore undoubtedly useful to gain a better understanding of landscape related conflicts in terms of their causes their course their dynamics their inherent logic and possible regulatory procedures

Frequently such conflicts manifest themselves in particular in different claims and aspired or arrogated interpretative sovereignties concerning what can or may be considered together as landscape here understood as a special case to space and these conflicts are not limited to the economic dimension but they also ignite in social political and cultural often also in aesthetic and moral questions The contributions to this anthology therefore focus on the question of how landscape conflicts can be seen as a productive social normality and be brought to a non violent and not necessarily consensual settlement

From Identity-Conflict to Civil Society Restoring Human Dignity and Pluralism in Deeply Divided Societies Valentina Gentile,2013-03 In societies like Bosnia or Rwanda deep divisions along ethnic and religious lines and the legacy of years of atrocities and violence pose serious challenges to liberal forms of consensus People do not recognise themselves as members of a political community and identity politics is pursued at the expense of liberal democratic projects and reconciliation programmes This book explores the nature and role of civil society in deeply divided societies Civil society is presented here as the sphere where a shared culture of civility emerges The culture of civility enables individuals to become part of a community of citizens and accept to reciprocate on the basis of some basic universal values such as the protection of human dignity The last chapter on Bosnia shows that relevance of civil society crucially depends on its capacity to represent the sphere where individuals are able to recognize and deal with transitional issues by appealing to the Bosnian culture of civility and developing a sense of justice based on a shared understanding of the idea of human dignity
