Proceedings, American Philosophical Society (vol. 137, No. 4, 1993) , The ethics of consumption Helena Röcklinsberg,Per Sandin,2013-11-05 We are all consumers What we consume how and how much has consequences of great moral importance for humans animals and the environment Great challenges lie ahead as we are facing population growth and climate change and reduced availability of fossil fuels It is often argued that key to meeting those challenges is changing consumption patterns among individual as well as institutions for instance through reducing meat consumption switching to organic or fair trade products boycotting or buycotting certain products or consuming less overall There is considerable disagreement regarding how to bring this about whose responsibility it is and even whether it is desirable Is it a question of political initiatives producer responsibility the virtues and vices of individual consumers in the developed world or something else Many of these issues pose profound intellectual challenges at the intersection of ethics political philosophy economics and several other fields This publication brings together contributions from scholars in numerous disciplines including philosophy law economics sociology and animal welfare who explore the theme of the ethics of consumption from different angles

Universally Comprehensible, Arrogantly Local Wiebke Keim,2017-04-01 From the perspective of the international scholarly community under North Atlantic domination South Africa might look like a peripheral place of knowledge production In recent years a plethora of voices calling for provincializing Europe for deconstructing Eurocentrism and for adopting post and decolonial perspectives have challenged such views They have partly transformed the academic landscape but have had limited success in challenging the fundamental global divides in production circulation and recognition of social scientific knowledge This book chooses a different take on the question of how North Atlantic domination could be challenged by conceptualizing counter hegemonic currents in international sociology Instead of providing theoretical and deconstructive critiques counter hegemonic currents are effective through collective social scientific practice the production of data knowledge and texts of new generations of scholars the interaction with extra university actors leading to the gradual emergence of integrated and productive scientific communities Their orientation towards local arenas of discussion and production of socially relevant research effectively reduces the belief in the hegemony of the North The historical development of South African labour studies is a case in point This study provides a systematic in depth analysis of research and teaching activities networks with extra academic actors and international cooperation over time in the three major Labour Studies centres Johannesburg Durban and Cape Town It draws on a rich variety of material including annual reports of research centres and labour service organizations teaching contents and exam questions the 1974 2003 volumes of the South African Labour Bulletin and newsletters of ISA Research Committee 44 on Labour Movements Qualitative analysis of four seminal books is used to assess their contribution to original general theory building In depth interviews with Labour Studies representatives complement the analysis of documents and literature by reconstructing the oral history of this scholarly community an indispensable source given that many debates could not appear in written form or had to be watered during the Apartheid years The study concludes that over time South African social scientists have generated knowledge on labour industry and trade unions that is universally comprehensible but arrogantly local
