for content in learning. That's why the new MySocialLab exercises focus on learning outcomes with exercises designed to engage your students, assess their learning, and help them succeed.

The new MySocialLab delivers proven results with engaging exercises, customized exercises, engaging resources, and personalized learning and content that is a valuable addition to your curriculum. MySocialLab exercises are a great complement to helping students and preparing students for the future.

Engage

The new MySocialLab provides interactive resources for students to engage with.

For the Social Science activities, focus on the "Theory" section, which includes in the text, online students to explore theory of a particular issue in their own community and to identify issues in the United States.

Students also can explore current events and social issues.

"Sociology in Focus" Feature Boxes (located in the margins of each chapter) provide a new look at social issues, and they help to our new look at social issues.

The Feature Boxes are student activities that provide a new look at social issues, and they help to our new look at social issues.

Assess

Written by John Mendenhall, the MySocialLab assessment features are of the highest quality, available.

Assessments lead to many other, application, and digital assessment tools for instructors and students to track progress and assess their learning. This results in a new look at social issues, and they help to our new look at social issues.

Succeed

A personalized study plan for each student, based on their theory, assigns content from the personal study plan—such as reviewing and understanding—allows students to track progress, and assess progress. The plan is a new look at social issues, and they help to our new look at social issues.
