

SERENDIPITOUS SOCIOLOGY AND AUTOBIOGRAPHY

We all grow old and live in a matrix of groups, networks, institutions and communities. This matrix is the substance of sociology. The student of sociology, even though sensitized to how a person's life is embedded in groups, can be guilty of serious omissions and patterned distortions when he or she comes to write their autobiography. The introspector and retrospector in sociological autobiography, though, can give us rare access to inner experience from their position of aloof detachment or passionate engagement.

Beginning with Herbert Spencer's two volumes in 1904, sociology has left us very few intellectual autobiographies. Monopolistic access to my own inner life has found many grooves and at least one or two of these are found in my patterned distortions away from sociology toward religion. I hope the time has not yet come, as Virginia Woolf said it quite easily can, when I may have forgotten far more of significance than I can remember. Certainly I am far from the position Heinrich Boll, the recipient of the Nobel Prize in Literature 1972, was in when he wrote that "not one title, not one author, not one book that I held in my hand has remained in my memory." But as I write this memoir of mine the words of the psychologist Alfred Adler can ring in my ears if I bring myself close to his voluminous writings: "It is easier to fight for one's principles than to live up to them."¹

The autobiographer is both the ultimate Insider and the ultimate Outsider in applying scientific understanding and insight to the self, the interplay of sequences of status-sets, role-sets and intellectual development. What results is not so much a condensed description than a step toward elucidation. I feel as if I have just made a start in the first quarter-century(1984-2010) of my attempt at autobiography. After five decades(1963-2010) of dipping in and out of sociology I have become more than a little conscious of sociology's hermeneutic influence as I go about writing my autobiography. Often when sociology's influence did appear it was accidentally, serendipitously.

From my memoir emerges a picture of a Bahá'í, a man who was a teacher and lecturer for 35 years, a father and a husband now for thirty-five, a pioneer for five decades, a man who aims to provide as piercing an insight into his own life and times and with as much muscular confidence that remained by his late middle age and the early years of his late adulthood. He maintains as much etiquette of expression and diplomacy as he has been able to cultivate over his lifetime; along the way he takes no prisoners and writes sparingly about those who caused him discomfort in

Stephen R. Sharkey

Sociological Autobiography Papers:

A Fragment of a Sociological Autobiography Edward Shils, 2017-07-05 Edward Shils was one of the giants of sociological theory in the period after World War II. In this autobiography written three years before his death in 1995, Shils reflects on the remarkable range of his life's work and activities, including founding and editing the journal Minerva, being a central figure in the Congress of Cultural Freedom, serving as a founding member of the editorial board of The Bulletin of Atomic Scientists, and being a member of the International Council on the Future of the University. Shils recognizes that a unity of concern runs through his many theoretical writings and activities. Early in his life, the concern was expressed as understanding the character of consensus. During the last fifteen years of his life, he refined his understanding of consensus through investigation of the nature of collective self-consciousness. That concern was the structure and character of the moral order of a society and, in particular, liberal democratic society. Accompanying the autobiography are two unpublished essays: Society, Collective Self-Consciousness and Collective Self-Consciousness and Rational Choice, two areas of intellectual concern discussed in the autobiography. The book contains a fascinating discussion of many of the people Shils knew throughout his illustrious career: Robert Park, Louis Wirth, Talcott Parsons, Karl Mannheim, Michael Polanyi, Audrey Richards, Karl Popper, Robert Merton, and many others. They represent Shils' final formulations on the character of society and its moral order. As such, it is a most important contribution both to the history of the social sciences in the twentieth century and to sociological theory.

Volume Two: Biographical Interviews: Oral Histories and Life Narratives focuses on the more established interview-based biographical research methods and considers the analytical strategies used for interview-based biographical research. Volume Three: Forms of Life Writing: Letters, Diaries, and Auto Biography considers the value of data contained within letters, diaries, and auto biography and illustrates how this data has been analyzed to reveal biographies and their social context. Volume Four: Other Documents of Life: Photographs, Cyber Documents, and Ephemera focuses on the other human documents and objects like photographs, cyber documents, emails, blogs, social networking sites, webpages, and other ephemera such as official documents that are used extensively in biographical research.

Schellenberg,2017-07-28 This volume offers intellectual portraits of eleven giants of the modern social sciences It is bound by two central themes The first is that there is a fundamental unity behind the various forms of social science There is a general social science as well as a variety of social science disciplines The second theme is that a biographical approach is a useful tool for making clear some of the central ideas of social science By looking at the lives and achievements of selected masters we should be better able to understand the fundamental nature or natures of social science In order to determine which figures should be regarded as masters Schellenberg defines the three main kinds of work he sees as central for social science First is the work of basic discovery done by searchers who made especially important contributions to empirical work in the social sciences The persons he selected for special treatment here are Louis Leakey Mary Leakey Margaret Mead and B F Skinner He then considers the work of theory choosing for examination seers who had made especially important theoretical contributions John Dewey Talcott Parsons and Kenneth Boulding Schellenberg next examines those social scientists who worked to seek changes in society These were the shakers or social reformers In Schellenberg s view these come in three main subtypes and he sought to include at least one example of each Gunnar Myrdal and Alva Myrdal as social engineers C Wright Mills as a rebellious social critic and Daniel Patrick Moynihan as one whose contribution was made more directly into the world of politics Schellenberg s exploration of the lives of these eleven masters of twentieth century social science reveals many surprises and ironies While he points out major contributions he also has felt free to make criticisms As he has said These were all real persons with failings and foibles as well as persons of great achievement I felt that the examination of

Sociology and Catholic Social Teaching Stephen R. Sharkey,2012-08-31

Sociology and Catholic Social Teaching Contemporary Theory and Research contains essays by key scholars in the territory where Catholic social thought and secular sociology meet and offers a much needed alternative to the relativism and individualism that so often characterize social scientific analysis today Contributors to this volume argue that Catholic social teaching as articulated so powerfully today in recent papal encyclicals and major summations such as the Compendium of the Social Doctrine of the Church offers a powerful moral framework for addressing today s pressing social problems This is especially true since many of its tenets find solid support in social scientific research on the nature of the person and the workings of culture and social institutions Sponsored by the Society of Catholic Social Scientists and including work by sociologists from both the Society and the Pontifical Academy of Social Sciences this volume is offered in the spirit of Pope John Paul II's exhortation to draw from contemporary social science whatever can help the Church better understand contemporary social issues and trends and thus better serve humanity Specific articles address such topics as the Church as a virtual nation in the international arena changing cultural norms regarding deviance the historical and contemporary relationship between Catholicism and mainstream academic sociology empirical support for a natural law perspective on family relations the social psychology of happiness and moral behavior among emerging adults the sociology of knowledge from a distinctively Catholic perspective and how the principles of subsidiarity and solidarity can be used to analyze and evaluate the functioning of institutions like the family education and the state Each author also offers some autobiographical reflections on how they relate sociology and their life of Faith This anthology will interest scholars in both sociology and Catholic social thought as well as advanced undergraduate and graduate students in these areas
