

SOCIOLOGY 100 FINAL EXAM STUDY

• SOCIAL STRATIFICATION

Karl Marx created the two class system bourgeoisie and proletariat

• RACE AND ETHNICITY

Ethnicity - Culture, traditions and beliefs

Race - Differences in human physical characteristics

Race changes depending on where you are as a result of colonization

Stuart Hall talks about race as floating signifier

Theories and perspectives associated with racism

Functionalist:

1. Nash (1964) focused his argument on the way racism is functional for the dominant group, for example, suggesting that racism morally justifies a racially unequal society. Consider the way slave owners justified slavery in the antebellum South, by suggesting black people were fundamentally inferior to white and preferred slavery to freedom.
2. A way to apply the functionalist perspective to racism is to discuss the way racism can contribute positively to the functioning of society by strengthening bonds between in-groups members through the ostracism of out-group members. Consider how a community might increase solidarity by refusing to allow outsiders access.

Conflict Theory:

A conflict theory perspective of U.S. history would examine the numerous past and current struggles between the white ruling class and racial and ethnic minorities, noting specific conflicts that have arisen when the dominant group perceived a threat from the minority group.

Interactionist:

some interactionists propose that the symbols of race, not race itself, are what lead to racism. Famed interactionist Herbert Blumer (1958) suggested that racial prejudice is formed through interactions between members of the dominant group: Without these interactions, individuals in the dominant group would not hold racist views. These interactions contribute to an abstract picture of the subordinate group that allows the dominant group to support its view of the subordinate group, and thus maintains the status quo.
