

UNIT 2 SOCIOLOGY PAPER 2

2014

Module 1

1. Within recent times, various countries have implemented population policies in an effort to address population and development issues.

For a named Caribbean society, evaluate its population policy in relation to TWO of the following:

- (i) Birth control
- (ii) Food security
- (iii) Housing

Define population policies- the measures and programmes taken by a country to achieve the balance necessary for sustainable population growth. These policies can be restrictionist or expansive. Population policy is determined based on the type of population growth a country experiences. For the most part Caribbean countries cannot grow their own food, we still import rice and wheat. Things that we should be able to grow in our country we still import in Trinidad. Trinidad has fertile land which housing is put up on, people are moving away from farming. There is not adequate housing in Trinidad and Tobago and housing is incredibly expensive as well. Overpopulation in Haiti. Ageing population in Barbados and Trinidad.

Birth control- look at Haiti and also speak about Thomas Malthus. If a lot of young people migrate the birth rate would drop. Population trends. You evaluate a policy by showing how the trends that you see would lead to the creation of the policy. A country's greatest resource is its human resource. If you have rapid population growth you would need policies to slow population growth to ensure proper allocation of resources and sustainable development. Policies- Family Planning to spread information about the use of contraceptives, provide contraceptives and to help people to space out when they have their children. China's 1 child policy. Educating children about the importance of not having many children, educating the persons about proper health care during pregnancy to lower infant mortality rate and teaching young girls about the importance of contraceptives. '2 is better than 2 many' -Jamaica. Monetary incentives for people to have children in countries with an ageing population.

Food security- Thomas Malthus on food supply and resources. Population grows geometrically and the resources grow arithmetically meaning that the population would outstrip the food supply. Food security is important because feeding your population is important in order to ensure their survival otherwise there would be unrest. Proper nutrition ensures the productivity of your population. People are moving away from agriculture and this leads to the importation of food increasing the prices of food in a country.

Policies- Food aid in Haiti. Incentives to farmers. People with farmers badges get VAT off of vehicles and agricultural products like seeds and fertilisers. The government invests in ECLAF (Eastern Caribbean Institute of Agriculture and Forestry) who does agricultural research to create seeds that are specific to our climate. Utilise agricultural land to produce raw resources
