

d) Jet Assembly No. 22 (Fig. 26)

This assembly is used on modern carburetors of the horizontal type.

It consists of a discharge nozzle, the emulsion tube s, the air correction jet a and the main jet carrier Y with the main jet Gg.

It differs from assembly 21 essentially in that the air correction jet is no longer located in the middle of the main air intake, but above it, and that the emulsion tube crosses the choke tube diagonally. This facilitates dismantling and cleaning.

e) New Jet Assemblies (Figs. 27 and 28)

In horizontal and downdraught carburetors of the latest models the emulsion tube and air correction jet are no longer located centrally in the choke tube, but at the side in a cylindrical well situated in the float
